BIOGRAPHY

The minimal live trio is a Parisian underground singularity. After hitting numerous clubs, the ensemble is on the road again to explore new venues and spread their erratic vibes.

Their music is a continuous flow of complex grooves with broke rhythms mixing minimal, house and acid techno music infusing dark and psychedelic ambiances.

IN CONVERSATION WITH... ODEN & FATZO

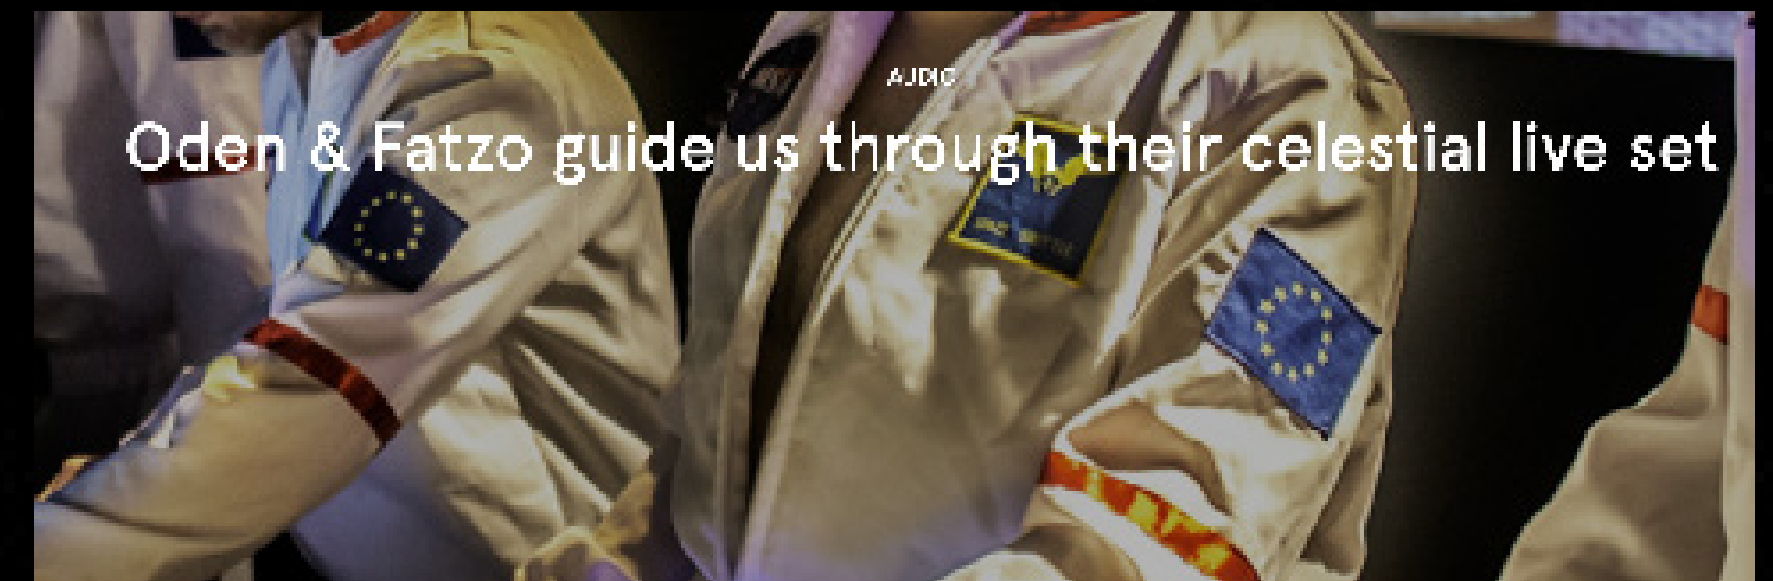

We've been avid fans of the joint project Oden & Fatzo since stumbling across their Instagram account by accident soon after they first collaborated. After sending us a bunch of unreleased demo's, we were hooked on their sound - not realising quite how early we had caught them...

Two years on and here they are, about to release a bomb of an EP on Fabe's Salty Nuts label. True to style, the flow of complex deep grooves, blissful breakdowns, dark ambiances and acid-flecked topfins are second-to-none. It has everything we were looking for - and the exciting thing is, they really are only just getting started...

We bagged them for their first ever full length interview in English, and we have to say it's a thoroughly enjoyable read. Check out clips of the upcoming Salty Nuts EP below and see what the Parisians had to say...

Oden & Fatzo guide us through their celestial live set

Oden & Fatzo first played live together in Paris towards the end of 2016. Prior to that, the two crews were already entrenched in the French capital's house scene - Oden as part of Electronik Feeling, and Fatzo with the Latitude System crew - but until that point it was rare that their paths would cross. Since then they've put out a string of cuts that loosely fall somewhere between tech house, breaks and acid, tied together with a crisp, modern sheen. It's a fast-paced rush on mired-and-neared styles that artists like Swocky have helped popularise recently, but with a busy calendar taking in key clubs around Europe, it's likely this crew will soon be following a similar trajectory. This Sunday they debut with us for Fabric's Journey to Planet 9, and on their mix, they show how their live sets typically go down. Tacking on celestial house bangers, wiggly acid hits and the odd hip house snippet at 10:45PM, this is a trip into Oden & Fatzo's futuristic world.
